

Afghanistan, War and the Media: Deadlines and Frontlines

Afghanistan, War and the Media: Deadlines and Frontlines explores the journalism coming out of the Afghan war from the frontlines and from the greater comfort of the library. Edited by Professor Richard Lance Keeble, of Lincoln University, and John Mair, of Coventry University, it is an unusual hybrid: the testimony of some of the best frontline correspondents of our era, much of it placed in appropriate historical contexts, alongside detailed academic analysis – and much more.

It includes a critical Afghan perspective, a view of a top journalist embedded with the Taliban, a call to “feminise” the coverage and an analysis of the compact between the military and the media.

Afghanistan, War and the Media: Deadlines and Frontlines

Preface by Huw Edwards, BBC

Edited by
Richard Lance Keeble and John Mair

The writers: Will Barton, Oliver Boyd-Barrett, Alex Crawford, Corinne Fowler, David Cromwell, David Edwards, Hanan Habibzai, David Hayward, Phillip Knightley, Allan Little, Tim Luckhurst, Jake Lynch, Kevin Marsh, Donald Matheson, Annabel McGoldrick, Alpaslan Özerdem, Stuart Ramsay, Vaughan Smith and John Tulloch.

Huw Edwards, presenter of BBC News at Ten, commented: “This book allows some of our leading practitioners of war reporting to have their say. The commentators also have theirs. It is a sobering read, to put it mildly.”
